Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurSet in the mid nineteen nineties, this fast moving thriller lifts the curtain on sex, sleaze and corruption in high places as the long reign of the government totters to an end, following the ousting of the iconic Margaret Thatcher. Downfall catches the mood of those times with a host of fictional characters who engage in political intrigue, sex, money laundering and murder, pursued by an Irish investigative journalist and his girlfriend, the daughter of a cabinet minister found dead in a hotel room after bondage

Presentation de l'auteur Set in the mid nineteen nineties, this fast moving thriller lifts the curtain on sex, sleaze and corruption in high places as the long reign of the government totters to an end, following the ousting of the iconic Margaret Thatcher. Downfall catches the mood of those times with a host of fictional characters who engage in political intrigue, sex, money laundering and murder, pursued by an Irish investigative journalist and his girlfriend, the daughter of a cabinet minister found dead in a hotel room after bondage sex. Biographie de l'auteur Malcolm Blair-Robinson was born in Sussex, England, shortly before the outbreak of the Second World War, into an Anglo-German family with connections reaching to the heart of the Nazi Party leadership in the early 1930s. He has used this knowledge in crafting a new novel, Hitlers First Lady, which provides new insight into the hidden dramas of the twentieth century. He is twice married, with five surviving children and three grandchildren.
